Backs: All of the backs have the name of the country at the top, then a short informational paragraph about the country. On "9 Brand" and "13 Brand" backs: The brands are listed below the paragraph, followed by the factory line at the bottom. No frame line or series title appears. These backs are found in black, blue, or red ink. On single brand backs: The series title follows the paragraph, then the brand name and the factory line are at the bottom. The text is enclosed by a thin double frame line. The Jack Rose back is found in blue ink only; Recruit in blue, green, and red; Scrap Iron Scrap in black only; Sub Rosa in black and blue; and Sweet Caporal Little Cigars in black/black-green and also in a separate brighter green.

GERMANY

This great empire has an area in Europe of 208,856 square miles, a population of 63,846,000, and an estimated national wealth of $45,000,000,000.80. The country abounds in useful minerals, especially coal and iron, and consequently ranks high among industrial nations. Next to England it is the second manufacturing country in Europe. As is typical of such a nation, it exports chiefly manufactured articles, and imports food and raw materials. In 1909 the foreign trade outward amounted to $1,044,839,000 and inward to $1,580,021,000. The soil in Germany is nowhere rich, but yields a fair return for hard work. Public education is compulsory, not partially but absolutely so, and literacy is unknown.

ARABIA

The country known as Arabia comprises the greater part of the peninsula bounded on three sides by the Arabian and Red Seas and the Persian Gulf. It is by no means a fertile country, but enough is raised to supply the comparatively scanty population with food. There is no surplus for traffic or exportation, coffee and dates excepted. Arabian horses are famous for beauty, endurance, and ability to live on a scant allowance of food and water. Next to horses, camels, sheep and goats are regarded as important items of property. Physically the Arabs are one of the most handsome of the dark-skinned races, being tall, lithe and well formed, with large dark eyes and black hair.

CANADA

The Dominion of Canada, the largest in area of Great Britain's colonies, has an area of 3,729,663 square miles, about one-sixteenth of the land area of the globe. The new census indicates a population of 7,358,000. In 1909 the total exports were $301,358,529.00 and the imports were $391,853,692.00. By the natural resources of the country it is destined to a future of great wealth and power. The timber in the enormous forests represents many potential fortunes, and the rich wheat growing districts of the Western provinces are attracting the immigration of desirable citizens, many from the United States. The Canadian fisheries amounted in 1909 to $29,629,169.00.

Tobacco Wrappers all with a thin double frame line around the text. To further complicate matters, many of these variations can be found in different back colors, and six factories were involved in producing this series. Some brands and colors can be found with more than one factory number. The 13 brand backs, for example, can be found in three colors (black, blue, and red), and the black backs were produced at four different factories. In all there are at least 28 different backs—and probably more. Further details are contained in the summary section.

The set also was distributed in quantity in wax-paper packages and also as an anonymous numbered issue (WII# ZB4-34). The last date on the cards is June 30, 1910, so the series was probably issued sometime later in 1910 or in 1911.

Fronts: All of the fronts show a head-and-shoulders portrait of a man in the native garb of the featured country with
